Our Transformation Through the Years...

The University of Massachusetts Lowell is located 25 minutes northwest of Boston in the historic, industrial city of Lowell. The campus spans more than 125 acres along the Merrimack River. More than 12,000 resident and commuter students of varying backgrounds pursue bachelors, masters, and doctoral degrees. For more than a century, this University has educated students to work in the real world, solve real problems, and help real people.

The University began as two schools. The Lowell Normal School, located on present day South Campus, was founded in 1894 to prepare students to become teachers, while the Lowell Textile School, located on present day North Campus, was founded in 1895 to train technicians and managers for the textile industry. Over the next 75 years, both institutions extended their offerings to meet the growing needs of the region. Lowell State and Lowell Tech, as they were then known, merged in 1975 to form the University of Lowell. In 1991, the campus became part of the University of Massachusetts system.

The history of this University isn't based solely on the ever changing economy, parking crunches, and prices of books. What makes UMass Lowell special are the students, faculty, and staff adding their own stories every year to shape this ever growing community. The Sojourn staff and Senior class of 2006 wish to dedicate this book to the 100 year anniversary of Lowell Tech's first yearbook, the Pickout.

Established in 1906, the Pickout raised money to support athletics. One of the sensational stories the history of UML has to offer is that of Lester Cushing, a 22-year-old Rockland, MA native hailing from Harvard. In 1911 he became the athletic director, professor of English, French, German, and history, as well as the advisor to the Pickout and the school newspaper, the Text. Through his promotion of athletics, Cushing was able to win students over to the liberal arts classes they hated.

The Pickout lasted for 69 years chronicling everything from war to spring carnival. The last issue of the Pickout was printed in 1975 and is titled "The Last Pickout." To quote the band Semisonic, "every new beginning comes from some other beginnings end." The end of the Pickout marked the beginning of the merge between Lowell Tech and Lowell State to the University of Lowell.

One hundred years after the first edition of the Pickout, the University of Massachusetts Lowell continues to thrive, grow and change. The first Women's National Championship victory for the university came this year thanks to the Field Hockey Team. After an astounding 43 years at the university, Chancellor William Hogan retired in June. Before his retirement, Hogan initiated a 10-year, $266 million plan to renovate UML's East, North and South Campuses. The renovation includes the building of a new parking garage on East Campus, renovations to current academic and residential buildings, and transforming the University into a bio and nano-technology research and development center. The future for UMass Lowell is bright and the University will continue to prepare students to succeed in the real world by solving real world problems, and helping real people.

UML... Saying Goodbye

Chancellor Hogan, 73, announced that he would retire as of July 3, bringing to an end a 25-year tenure as chief executive officer of the Lowell campus. Chancellor Hogan joined the faculty of Lowell Technological Institute in 1963 and served in a variety of academic and administrative positions before becoming President of the University of Lowell in 1981 and Chancellor of UMass-Lowell in 1991. Lowell Tech and the University of Lowell are predecessor institutions of UMass-Lowell.

"Bill Hogan has led the Lowell campus for a quarter century and in that time has developed numerous areas of research and academic excellence, particularly in the realm of science and technology. It is fair to say that Chancellor Hogan invented UMass-Lowell and then reinvented the campus several times along the way. Chancellor Hogan established the gold standard in terms of community involvement, building partnerships and bonds in Lowell and in the Merrimack Valley that have brought economic success and social progress to the region. When it came to caring about his city, his region and his University, Bill Hogan took a back seat to no one. The University of Massachusetts and the Commonwealth of Massachusetts benefited from his distinguished service and are better places because of him," President Wilson said.

The University of Massachusetts has been providing high quality educational opportunities for Massachusetts residents and for students and faculty from all over the world for more than 140 years. Our 11,000 graduates each year enrich the Commonwealth, our industries, and our society. The nearly 60,000 students we educate each year are predominantly drawn from the region and remain in the region after graduation.

More than 210,000 UMass alumni live in Massachusetts and represent the foundation of the state's workforce and contribute enormously to our knowledge-based economy. With more than $375 million in annual research funded by the National Science Foundation, the National Institutes of Health, our corporate partners, and other Federal and Private Foundations, the University of Massachusetts is one of the three largest research universities in the Commonwealth and is rated as one of the top Universities in the world by organizations such as the Times of London.

The mission of UMass Lowell is to provide students an affordable education of high quality and to focus its scholarship and public service on assisting sustainable regional economic and social development. In pursuit of these objectives, UMass Lowell's faculty, staff and students play a significant role in the life of the region. Much of the activity takes the form of partnerships, some as small as one-on-one and project-specific work with community organizations or area businesses, others as far-reaching as ongoing commitments with multiple partners. Whether a partnership strengthens K-12 education, helps improve the environment, assists economic development, promotes healthier communities, contributes to the area's cultural vitality, or connects with the community in dozens of other ways, UMass Lowell makes a difference.
